About FiftyEight

Our vision is simple: Good work for people everywhere.

FiftyEight partners with business, academia, government and civil society to better identify and take action to address exploitation in the supply chain, raising the bar for working conditions globally. We combine innovative research and actionable data with technological solutions to address worker exploitation and harmful forms of child labour. We draw together insights across the breadth of supply chains, from grassroots communities to boardrooms.

As a B Corp certified company, FiftyEight ranks in the top 1% of businesses globally for meeting the highest standards of social and environmental performance, transparency and accountability. We are respected global leaders in creating technological solutions to prevent, mitigate and eliminate exploitation from the earliest stages of the recruitment journey. Our research and recommendations on addressing the challenges of modern slavery and worst forms of child labour are referenced widely in academic and industry publications and are used to inform activities and interventions within both public and private sector institutions internationally.

Our dedication to improving workplaces globally includes our commitment to the personal growth and development of every member of our team.
